REPORT.

It is once again a gratifying duty to be able to report favourably of the condition of the Asylum, the uniform health of the inmates, and the satisfactory conduct of the attendants and servants. Though the year opened with somewhat additional anxieties and fuller engagements, the work that has been done, and consequent promotion of the economy of the establishment, and the health of the patients secured, has equalled if not exceeded the attainments of any previous year.

The report of to-day is as follows:—

Patients in the House, 31st December, 1861.	Males.	Females	Total.
„ Admitted since	129	186	315
	51	58	109
	180	244	424
Discharged	26	31	57
Died	18	15	33
	44	46	90
TOTAL.	136	191	334

This table gives rather more than half the number discharged, or above 50 per cent. compared with the admissions within the year; and 10 per cent. on the deaths compared with the number of resident inmates. Eight patients have been admitted more than during the year 1861, seven less have been discharged, and the deaths have fallen by twenty. This diminished obituary, together with the proportional diminution in sickness which is necessarily its background, affords full illustration of the general health of the patients throughout the year : more especially when the ages and the more than usually unsatisfactory state in which many of late have been admitted, are observed. It would be unjust to the Asylum reputation to omit repeated reference to the neglected causes previous to admission, which so quickly tend to swell the catalogue of deaths. The antecedents in this large class of persons are strictly speaking prochronic, i. e. entirely previous to the period in which we have any opportunity of arresting disease or of prolonging life. Our fears have to a great extent been realized by the clause in the Poor Law Removal Act, which by throwing the charge of the patient's maintenance from off the parish to which he belongs and on to the common fund of the Union, has increased the number of hopeless or unpromising admissions. Very few recent cases have been received throughout the year : and it must be a subject of regret that the character of a hospital should to such an extent be merged into that of a house of detention and safe keeping.

A large amount of work has been done by the patients throughout the year in the ordinary requirements of the House, besides many additional improvements noticed at the last visit of the Commissioners in Lunacy. Though the Asylum is an old building, we are fully prepared by comparative estimates to prove that the repairs are not extraordinary when compared even with those of some newly built Asylums: and it would be strange indeed if as much alacrity should not be shewn in contributing to the repairs of an old house as in subscribing towards the erection of a new one ; and as now the solitary possessor of almost a life-long interest, in all connected with the present character and the future welfare of this Asylum, the Superintendent cannot but feel thankful, that the convenience of the House and the comfort of its inmates have not been inadequately secured by any miscalculations upon lime and mortar.

The garden which adjoins the new recreation room now fully occupied, is a source of great comfort to the more quiet females who take great delight in keeping it in order. Horticulture has a peculiar suitability as an employment quite within the capacity of female labourers. Independently of its healthy and engrossing influence on the mind, during the time of the very moderate physical exercise, the continued anticipation and fresh blossoming of expectations and interest in the results of to-morrow, give it a fascination which is salutary to relieve morbid self-consciousness, to direct the thoughts from self, and to bestow that reward on the desert mind, which reflects the counterpart to the garden, as “instead of the thorn comes up the fir-tree, and instead of the briar, the myrtle-tree.”

A walk has been completed entirely round the Asylum grounds: and when some few minor improvements are completed which are in progress, and which have been unavoidably postponed by the building of the chapel, there will not be much probability of any serious outlay being required for many years to come. Should the admission of females increase much beyond the present number of 200, there is ground enough on which to build small detached tenements for selected inmates, by our own willing labourers.

The patients have this year had more than their usual recreations and amusements. Parties of from thirty to forty have constantly been formed for excursions beyond the bounds of the Asylum, and they have never occasioned trouble or regret: but on the contrary the Divine law has ever been exemplified, of making the current of moral and intellectual rectitude, and moral and intellectual gratification, unite and augment each other. A very large party spent a day by the sea side at Bawdsey: the enjoyment was general and hearty, and so satisfactory in the retrospect left upon the minds of the excursionists, that we now register this among our annual medicines, as one particular recipe, drawn out on the principle of sympathy in pleasure being as truly a hygienic secret, as sympathy in grief and pain. A more rare exemplification of this occurred in a day's excursion to London. The International Exhibition hardly included among its millions any more appreciating visitors than the band of patients who were sent with their attendants from this House. The encouragement of recreations and amusements has been the uniform practice since the opening of the Asylum, and out-door occupation has long ceased to be a novelty with us. The Superintendent has a record of a party of the male patients as early as 1831, who went to play at cricket in the fields at Ufford.

The chief object of constant interest and hearty labours this year has been the Chapel. It is now just completed: and we can report it as kept within the amount originally granted. As far as expressions of approval are a test, it has given general satisfaction; and we think we may add without assumption, that never was so much and such successful work crowned at such a rate before. The costliness of the Jewish Tabernacle consisted in the intense free will of the contributions, as much as in the value of the materials; the costliness of our unpretending chapel is derived more exclusively still from the same source. It would be difficult to translate to a debtor and creditor account the happy result of a curative nature already in the form of interest on the outlay. Excellent sand, from the deposit in the front meadow was supplied at a saving of carting, &c., to this consecrated purpose; and as some of the working material and almost all the labour have been of HOME produce, we are inclined to strike a moral and psychological balance sheet, relative to this primary appendage to a Lunatic Asylum whose erection had been but too long delayed. It would not have been possible to have engaged with any satisfaction in such a work as this without the directions and inspection of an architect; and the Superintendent's friend Mr. Hayward has supplied a great many minute drawings, and supervised the building in its progress. For these drafts and this labour, I am desired by Mr. Hayward to say, that he makes no charge.

The selected site of the chapel has been the source of much commendation from all whose judgment is correct. The Commissioners in Lunacy thought well of it, and expressed officially their satisfaction at the extended walk to it on the female side, which the boundary path will afford in fine weather. The chapel is placed just outside the old cemetery ground, now domestically consecrated by the interment of one who identified herself with every want, sorrowed in every sorrow, and rejoiced in every joy, of those to whom she devoted her life-long energies. Her sorrowing survivor only solicits the painful gratification of being allowed to supply a light of hallowed memory, which may fall on the devotion of the insane worshippers, by a memorial window at his own expense.

It now only remains that I should throw myself upon the further indulgence of the visitors, with the full conviction that time is rather to be reckoned by services than by years. I could wish those services presented a better account; and the only reference that I would make to them now has special regard to that support which I feel to be more than ordinarily needed. Independently of those petty perplexities which are constantly occurring, and which cannot promote the real welfare of the patients, while they create a restlessness in the Superintendent's mind; responsibilities are increased to an extent unknown to those who have not constant communication with official authorities: and it is quite possible (though we have too much happy confidence to believe it probable here,) that a reputation hardly earned by watchful solicitude through a long life, for the real welfare of the insane, may become, without any fault of its possessor, entangled in the intricacies of that labyrinth our present Lunacy law.

JOHN KIRKMAN, M.D..

Commissioners' Report.

Since the last visit of the Commissioners, on the 17th April, 1861, the changes in the patients have been as follow:—

	M.	F.	Total.
Admitted.....	73	92	165
Discharged	47	49	96
,, of whom recovered	38	46	84
Died (all from ordinary causes)	36	29	65

The patients all of whom we have seen, are at present 334 in number, viz.—137 Males and 197 Females.

They were at the time of our visit, generally quiet and orderly and personally as to clothing and otherwise in a comfortable state.

The absence of all complaints, and the contented and cheerful aspect of the great body of the patients of both sexes, furnish sufficient proof of their kind and judicious treatment.

The sanitary condition of the Asylum appears to be very satisfactory.

The instances of seclusion since the last visit have been rare; according to the Medical Journal, which in that and other respects is carefully kept, during no one week have there been more than three patients secluded and during 44 out of the whole period of 77 weeks, there was no case of seclusion.

The dinner this day was excellent, consisting of boiled beef, bacon, and turnips.

We have nothing new to record in reference to the general system and arrangements, which continue as heretofore.

We have satisfaction in noting the following structural and other improvements since the last visit.

1. The new recreation room on the female side has been completed, suitably furnished, and brought into occupation as a work room.
2. The airing court in connection with the room last referred to has been enlarged.
3. A new airing ground immediately adjoining has been walled in, and ornamentally laid out and planted, and being $\frac{3}{4}$ of an acre in extent, much contributes to the enjoyment and healthy recreation of the patients.
4. A good dairy and meat larder have been constructed.
5. The bed rooms throughout the Asylum have been papered.
6. Some more stone floors in both divisions have been removed, and more rooms and a corridor on the female side have been boarded.
7. The baths have been lowered as suggested at the last visit, and the bath rooms have been enlarged and improved.
8. A walk has been completed round the grounds of the Asylum.

We are glad further to report that a commodious Chapel is in progress of erection, within a convenient distance of the Asylum : it is constructed for 200 patients.

Gas is still a great desideratum, and we trust that the committee of visitors will no longer delay its introduction into the Wards.

We think it due to the Assistant Medical Officer Mr. Davis to state, that amongst other active duties, he visits all the sleeping rooms in the male division at a very early hour in the morning daily, and personally inspects the condition of the beds and bedding.

Signed { R. W. S. LUTWIDGE } Commissioners
